By inviting a sign to a tea party, you will get the chance to spend some quality time with them, increasing their support ratings with you tremendously if you play your cards properly. However, in order to get long with your guests, you need to know them well enough to choose the topics of conversation. To help you enjoy a beautiful cuppa with everyone you want, we put together a tea party guide to Fire Emblem: Three houses to help you choose tea, talk topics and more. How to invite signs to tea You will unlock the option to invite students to tea in Part 1 fire emblem: Three houses. Early in the game, during one of your explore stages in the monastery, you will get a try to offer a tea set to another student who is interested in tea. Lorenz golden slead is a great choice here, and when you deliver it to him, you will unlock the option to invite other characters to tea. It will cost you one of your activity points for that day, but you can get a lot of support from that as well. Choose the correct topic of conversation and your tea party guest will stay around in Fire Emblem: Three Houses. © Nintendo There's nothing better than a pleasant relaxing cup of tea and Fire Emblem: Three Houses to Know It. Tea parties give you the opportunity to increase the level of support of one character, and also offer a bonus boost to your Charm stat when it is well implemented. Get enough options right and the character will stay with you for an extended period that lets you grab screenshots or talk to them for a while. To succeed in the Tea Party, you have several important decisions, including which tea to offer, three topics of conversation and, if you're successful, how to respond to their final comment. Each character has two teas that they love, and a series of conversational theo and a range of conversational theo and they like. There are also final responses that will help you keep the tea party for a special ending where you can watch your companion or offer them gifts. To help you, we catalogued all the tea responses for the characters we have invited so far. Have in mind that we still invite each character in the game (after all there is a lot) and that different topics of conversation can arise as in the list below. The key is to try to choose tea and conversation options that suit the character by when you've spent time. Good military guys won't want to talk about dream knights, for example. With this out of the way, here's our complete guide to tea for the Fiery Emblem: Three Houses. *The characters are listed in alphabetical order Select the right topic of conversation and you will have the perfect tea in the Fire Emblem: Three Houses. © Nintendo Alois Likes: Equipment upkeep, past laughter, I count on you Annette Fave tea: Almond mix Like: backyard couples, plans for the future End: the only way to clean is to clean with all your force...
